

EAT MEAT

No man who lives on meat was ever known to kick his wife or ask for a divorce. Adam got into a row right off because he had no hog meat, butter or black bass. Napoleon lost the battle of Waterloo because the allied forces had bacon for breakfast the morning of the fight. The French had vegetable soup. No war can be successfully waged without hog meat.

Americans are the most frisky people on earth because they eat the most hog meat.

A vegetable diet woman is as cold and clammy and unlovable as a turnip. If you wish to put roses in the cheeks of your girls, vitality in their every motion, and brains in their heads, feed them meat.

If you want your boy to get a job and hold it, go to the front, and amount to something, give him bacon, grease, ham fat or tallow, three times a day.

The world is full of cranks who are always getting up some new fad about hay soup or corn fodder tea.

REPUBLICANS

SOME CHANCES ON BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

Suffrage Supporters Take Stump in Grayling Township.

The old adage of bright skies being Republican victory proved true in last Monday's election in Grayling. It was as pretty a day as could be desired and the voters were on hand early, ready to cast their ballots as their judgments might dictate.

Nobody accused to be making great pre-election claims, but all were hopeful. Good men had been nominated upon all tickets and each was hopeful of his party's support. The campaign had been short and throughout free from personalities and discourtesies.

The greatest fight seemed to be on the office of Supervisor and was hotly contested between J. J. Collen, Republican; Adelbert Taylor, Democratic and F. R. Deckrow, Progressive; the former winning out by a plurality of 35. Also for the office of Highway commissioner, Peter Aebli, Republican, was given a plurality of 18 over Rasmusson, Democratic; Frank M. Freeland, Progressive, running but 5 votes behind Rasmusson.

The straight tickets for the various parties were as follows: Progressive, 40; Republican, 75; Democratic 52, with 112 split tickets.

A tabulated report of the vote in Grayling township may be read in this column.

The state ticket in Grayling township went strongly Republican. The straight tickets were as follows: Republican, 113; Democratic, 70; Progressive, 68; and 19 split tickets.

Throughout all the townships the state and township republican candidates won out with good pluralities.

The following supervisors were elected to represent their respective townships: J. J. Collen, Grayling; Chas. Craven, Frederic; Benjamin Sherman, Maple Forest; E. S. Houghton, Lovell; E. Richardson, South Branch; John Hanna, Beaver Creek.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed for ever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous membrane.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Interesting News from Our Educational Institution.

Mrs. Will Brennan and Miss Carrie White visited the first grade.

M. A. Bates visited the first grade and told the pupils some interesting stories about the schools and homes of the little black people of the South.

The first grade are making a study of the picture "Feeding the Birds" by Millet.

Oscar Borchers and Herman Hanson dramatized the story of the "Boy and the Wolf" very cleverly.

School work was resumed Monday morning with a good attendance in every department.

Edward Fairchild has returned to school.

Florence Smith, Lillie Fischer and Clyde Hum were visitors in the high school last Monday.

Charles Owens has left school, the family having moved to Lovell.

The class in second year German has begun the story of William Tell.

Frank Tetu of the eighth grade had the misfortune to fall from his bicycle and fracture his arm.

In the last monthly test the A division of the eighth grade gained a victory over the B division by seven points.

The physics class has begun the subject of heat.

We very much regret to note the fact that Bernadette Casady has left school. She has left a splendid record.

In the mock trial case of Miss Mollie Johnson vs. Ambrose Mielstrup, a jury has been impaneled consisting of the following men: T. W. Hanson, Charles T. Jerome, M. A. Bates, M. Hanson, Dr. S. N. Insley, Scott Loader, A. M. Lewis, Oscar P. Schumann, Wilhelm Raae, Rev. V. J. Huston, Alfred Olson and R. W. Brink.

Mrs. Udell.

Mrs. George Udell died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Leonard after an illness of over two years, of which time she was confined to her bed with cancer of the stomach.

She was a patient sufferer and knew her race was nearly run so waited for the call from above.

Mrs. Udell was born in St. Clare county, Mich., in 1875 and was married to George Udell in 1894, who died in 1911.

She leaves to mourn her loss, one son, Stanley, three and one half years old, her father and mother, three brothers, Ira, of Grayling; George of Lansing and Neil of Cincinnati, O.; one sister, Mrs. Lillian Caverly of Ogemaw county, and, niece, Mrs. Flora Peas, of Grayling and many friends.

Last winter Mrs. Udell came out and took a stand for Christ who called her away from this world of sorrow and pain.

Funeral services were held in the M. P. church. The remains were laid to rest awaiting the morn when all who sleep in the dust shall hear His voice and come forth to be judged according to their works done here below.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Leonard and family wish to thank the kind friends of Grayling who offered their sympathies in their time of trouble during the illness and death of their daughter, and also for the floral offerings.

There are but two types of cars made: the "Ford" and the "Can't Afford." The Ford is light in price, weight, upkeep and running expense, and within reach of all. The "Can't Afford" is heavy in price, weight, upkeep and running expense and in reach of only the man with a heavy purse. If you want that Ford see its now.

You know us. You know we would not—that we could not afford to go back on our word. Nor can you afford to ignore this money-back-if-not-satisfied offer on this splendid laxative.

We honestly believe we have the best bowel remedy ever made—the most pleasant to take, most permanently beneficial laxative for relief from the misery and dangers arising from constipation.

We wouldn't say this if we didn't believe it to be true. We wouldn't risk our reputation by making such statements did we not feel sure you would find them true.

Our faith is built both on the knowledge of what Rexall Ordineries are made of and on observation of very many severe cases in which they have proven their merit.

Try them at Our Risk

If they do not abundantly prove their merit with you also—if you are not entirely satisfied with them—we will refund your money—and we will do that on your new say-so. We don't ask you to risk a penny. Isn't that fair?

Just let the bowels fall in properly doing their work—just let their action be delayed and incomplete and the entire system and every other organ suffers. Wastes that

G. P. SCHUMANN, Publisher

Skill of the Japanese at Jujutsu is a Marvel to the Visitor From Western Countries.

In his book on "The Fighting Spirit of Japan," H. J. Harrison says of jujutsu: "The word jujutsu, as used by the older somochi, is written with two characters, the first 'ju' meaning to obey, submit to, weak, soft, pliable, and the second meaning 'jutsu' or 'science.' The use of the first character is intended to imply that 'jujutsu' relies for its triumphs not upon brute strength, but upon skill and science, the ability to win by appearing to yield. Thus in 'jujutsu' the opponent underneath may have the other at his mercy, though to the novice he may appear to be defeated. 'Jujutsu' is the art which every samurai (noble or warrior) under the feudal regime was compelled to learn and it was often a point of honor among the higher-minded ones, if attacked by a vulgar opponent, whether with or without a weapon, to try first to overcome him by means of jujutsu before drawing their own sword. Nowadays, however, jujutsu is no longer a monopoly of the military class and the various 'dōjō' or schools in the large cities render it possible for any respectable person to practice it."

Mr. Harrison tells of an expert who was sitting in a restaurant when he "fell foul of a couple and promptly threw him downstairs. The couple returned to the fray with 14 comrades, but the expert calmly sat at the head of the table and as fast as the coolies came up in single file, owing to the narrowness of the passage, he simply choked them in detail and hurled them down again. In the excitement of the moment he was rather more rough than was strictly necessary, and so broke one man's neck. The rest fled in terror, carrying off their dead and wounded. The 'judo' expert was arrested, but as he was easily able to prove that he had been one man against 15 he was, of course, acquitted. Nevertheless, the kodokwan temporarily suspended him for his conduct, which was deemed unduly violent."

Violence above what the combat calls for is generally condemned in jujutsu. Mr. Harrison quotes a native exponent, who says: "The employment of violent physical strength in jujutsu is not desirable, but is sometimes admissible. The pupil, however, who has not completely mastered his art must avoid the reckless use of force, which tends to hamper the free movements of the body and limbs, and, therefore, to prevent him from learning the mystery of the art."

Cliff Dwellings in Utah.
Cliff dwellings more than 1,000 years old and buildings of even greater age have been discovered in Utah, according to D. B. Miller, assistant supervisor of the general land office, who has been at the head of a surveying party in that state for the last ten months.

"The cliff dwellings we found in Utah undoubtedly are many hundreds of years old," said Mr. Miller. "They were undoubtedly built by the Montezuma Indians. These Indians also built on the mesa lands, and many interesting structures were found beneath the surface of the lands. In Utah are three natural bridges that are more wonderful than the natural bridge of Virginia. All are wider and two considerably higher than the Virginia bridge. One of these bridges has a span of more than 200 feet and the arch is more than 100 feet from the ground. It seems almost to have been made by man. White persons rarely have visited these wonders of nature."

Forewarned.
A popular Cleveland doctor tells this story of a bright boy, his own, who had reached the mature age of nine after an early career marked by many wild and mischievous pranks.

His restless nature had made him somewhat of a torment to his teacher at times, and one afternoon not long ago he kept him after the others were dismissed and had a serious talk with him. Perhaps she was a little afraid that her admonitions were falling on stony ground. Anyway, she finally said: "I certainly will have to ask your father to come and see me."

"Don't you do it," said the boy. The teacher thought she had made an impression. "Yes," she repeated, "I must send for your father."

"You better not," said the boy. "Why not?" inquired the teacher. "Cause he charges $2 a visit," said the scamp.

Natural Query.
"I am going to start in tomorrow to do my own cooking."

Mr. Todhunter—What's the baby screaming about now?
Mrs. Todhunter—She wants the moon.

Mr. Todhunter—Oh, is that all? She was making such a racket I thought she wanted the ballet.—Puck.

Improving Slowly.
"I guess we are coming along."

"Yes."

"We had a murder trial the other day that wasn't called a 'travesty on justice.'"

Tempering the Blow.
Assistant Editor—We'll have to send that young lady's manuscript back. Her story is too pathetic for our pages.

Editor—Sprinkle a few drops of water over it; she'll think they are tears.

Exaggerated Eye.
"Pimble looks to have a high opinion of himself."

"Yes, indeed. Why, every time Pimble shows himself he thinks he's making history."

NEW INCOME TAX STARTS AT $4,000

Elaborate Provision for Graduated Payment System in New Tariff Bill.

Washington, D. C.—Included in the Democratic tariff revision bill is an income tax section, which would require every resident of the United States who earns more than $4,000 a year to pay a tax of 1 per cent on his earnings in excess of the exemption. This would not compel the man who earns only $4,000 to pay a tax, but it would demand that one who earned $4,100, for example, pay into the government treasury an annual tax of 1 per cent on $100, or $1.

The bill also would provide higher rates of taxation for persons with larger incomes, adding a surtax of 1 per cent additional on earnings in excess of $20,000; 2 per cent additional on earnings in excess of $50,000, and 3 per cent additional on earnings in excess of $100,000.

How Surtax Would Be Imposed.

Under the surtax provisions the man who earns $20,000 would pay to the government each year at the rate of 1 per cent on $16,000 ($4,000 exempt), or $160. If he earns $30,000 he would pay 1 per cent on $26,000, and 2 per cent on $10,000, making his annual tax $360. The person with a $50,000 income would pay 1 per cent on $46,000 and 2 per cent on $10,000, a total tax of $760. The man with an income of $100,000 would be required to pay 1 per cent on $86,000, 2 per cent on $30,000, and 3 per cent on $50,000, which would be $1,560, bringing his total income tax to $2,260. Anyone with a net income of a million would pay this $2,260 on his first $100,000 and in addition he would pay 4 per cent on $900,000, which would bring his total tax to $38,260.

This bill also would reenact the present corporation tax law, imposing a 1 per cent tax on the earnings of corporations, stock companies, insurance companies and the like, but it would exempt partnerships. This is a flat tax, there being no graduated scale as the earnings increase. The few changes from the present corporation tax act concern chiefly the time of making returns and the time for collection.

The bill includes under its provisions the property and earnings in this country of persons who live abroad. May bring in $100,000,000.

It is estimated by members of the ways and means committee that approximately $100,000,000 in revenue may be derived from this new tax, including the corporation tax, that amount making up for the deficit in revenue to be derived from imports by virtue of the greatly reduced tariff and the transfer to the free list of articles that are classified as necessities of living.

Incomes of taxable persons shall include gains, profits and income derived from salaries, wages or compensation for personal services of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, businesses, trade, commerce or sales or dealings in property, also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, including income from property, income from but not the value of property acquired by bequest, devise or descent, and also proceeds of life insurance policies paid upon death of persons insured.

Provision Made for Deductions.

The bill allows as deductions in computing net income all necessary expenses actually incurred in carrying on any business, not including personal living or family expenses, interest accrued and payable within the year by a taxable person on indebtedness; all national, state, county, school and municipal taxes, not including local benefit taxes; losses incurred in trade or from fires, storms or shipwreck not compensated by insurance or otherwise; debts actually ascertained as worthless and charged off; also reasonable allowance for wear and tear on property; but no deduction will be allowed for expense of restoration or improvements made to increase property value.

It excepts also, in computing net income, amounts received as dividends upon the stock of any corporation, joint stock company, association or insurance company which is taxable upon its net income under the corporation tax provision of the bill.

The bill excludes the compensation of the president of the United States during his term, that of judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States, and compensation of all officers and employees of a state or any political subdivision thereof.

System of Collection Framed.

It establishes a system of collection of the tax at its source, requiring all persons, firms, partnerships, companies, corporations, joint stock companies, associations, insurance companies, and all trustees, executors, administrators, receivers, etc., and officers and employees of the United States having the control or disposal of salaries, wages, interest and other profits and income of another person to withhold and pay to the collector of internal revenue the amount of income tax due from such person. All such persons or firms are made personally liable for such tax.

Persons or corporations liable to make return on incomes who fall to do so at a specified time, are made liable to a fine not exceeding $500 and the penalty for false or fraudulent returns is fixed at $1,000 or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

"In formulating this additional impost," said Chairman Underwood in his report, "the attempt has been made to provide not only a source of revenue, but also a means of redressing in some measure the unequal tax burdens which result from the practice of basing the federal income entirely upon customs and internal revenue duties. This is a system of taxation which inevitably throws the burden of supporting the government upon the shoulders of the consumers. It correspondingly exempts the men of larger income, whose consumption of the ordinary necessities of life is subject to tariff taxation in a far less aggregate degree than is that of small-income earners, who expend the greater proportion of their resources for the ordinary necessities of life."

Underwood Defends Plan.

Speaking of the principle of taxation laid down and the graduated system proposed, Mr. Underwood declared:

"The progressive principle already has been sustained by the Supreme court of the United States in the inheritance tax cases and there can be no doubt that the same principle applies to the income tax included in this bill and will be fully upheld should it ever be called into question. Owing to defects in personal property taxation, the larger incomes in the United States have for many years been able to escape with less than their share of the general burden of taxation, and this inequity will be, it is believed, in part overcome by the plan proposed."

The bill provides that all taxable persons shall be notified of the amount for which they are liable under the law on or before the 1st day of June of each year and assessments must be paid on or before June 30. For delay in making payments and ten days after notice, there shall be added the sum of 5 per cent of the amount of tax unpaid and interest at the rate of 1 per cent a month from the time the tax fell due.

Superior Points of the Akron Truss

1. The pads WILL NOT SLIP.
2. Severe and almost hopeless cases of rupture are held where all others fail.
3. Pads are made from the finest rubber, blown to a fine porosity, soft, comfortable and velvety to the flesh, and firm enough to hold all cases perfectly.
4. The Pads extend beyond the rupture edges and thus afford a holding surface, this with the remarkable holding qualities of their fine rubber surfaces are such that when the ruptured parts are brought together they are held together and every possible chance given to unite.
5. They hold the rupture by covering, not by a senseless, cruel corking only, that prevents closing the rupture.
6. Few ruptures can be cured by a truss, but where it is possible for a truss to cure a rupture by holding it properly, this truss will accomplish it.

The annual township meeting was held at the usual hour on election day (last Monday), at which the clerk read his annual report and appropriations were made for another year. During the past year there has been assessed for the contingent fund 1-10th of one percent; for highway fund 3-10th of one percent and highway repair fund, outside of the village of Grayling, 1-4th of one percent. These appropriations for this year were left the same except for the contingent fund which was increased to 1-4 of one percent.

The regular meeting of the village council was held at the court house last Monday, instead of the town hall, which was being used for election purposes that evening. This was the annual meeting and the president and all the trustees were present. After disposing of the business in regular order the township treasurer, M. Hanson, made his annual report, which the committee reported to be in good order. Ordinances establishing fire limits within the down-town districts and one to prohibit the running at large of any and all kinds of domestic fowls within the village limits were adopted. These ordinances are published in this issue in legal form. The council adjourned to meet next Monday evening when the village appointments will be made.

The following letter explains itself: Dayton, Ohio, April 5, 1913 Mr. T. W. Hanson, Mayor, Grayling, Mich.

Dear Sir: We acknowledge with great gratitude your letter of April 2, enclosing New York New York $411.00, for the relief of the flood sufferers in this city. In the name of all the afflicted people of Dayton, we thank you from the bottom of our hearts. Such an expression of practical sympathy touches us deeply. Dayton has been visited by a dreadful calamity and is passing through a dark period in her history, yet we are not dismayed, as the love of humanity shown by our friends and sister cities throughout the length and breadth of the land has cheered us greatly and filled us with hope for a newer, bigger and grander Dayton. Be assured that the offering of the citizens of Grayling, so freely given, will be carefully administered and used to relieve the greatest possible amount of suffering and distress. Very Sincerely, DAYTON CITIZENS' RELIEF COM. W. G. Bippus, Secy-Treas.

Mrs. Mary Hoell, wife of Fred Hoell, deceased, died at Traversa City hospital last week Friday, April 4th and was brought to Grayling Saturday for burial. The funeral was held Sunday from the home of her son, Christ Hoell, and the remains were laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery. The deceased was born in Switzerland in 1844; she came to this country in 1882 and located at Cincinnati, Ohio and married soon thereafter. Two years later they came to Grayling. In 1899 Mrs. Hoell was taken to Traversa City hospital where she remained until her death. Mrs. Kniff, Chris Hoell, Daniel Hoell, and Mrs. John Anderson, all of this city are left to mourn the loss and revere the memory of their mother.

The sixth annual dancing party given by the local Masonic lodge was held at the opera house last week Thursday night. It was another star entertainment to the credit of this popular order. All the details had been carefully prepared and on the night of the party nothing had been overlooked, and everything was in readiness for the expected guests, and they came in such numbers that the hall room was filled to its dancing capacity. Two orchestras, Walton's and Bradley's furnished the music, and as one orchestra finished playing, the other was ready for the next number, thus there was no wait between dances, and this greatly relieved the congestion upon the floor. It was a pretty party and probably as enjoyable one as held here this season. Rows of crepe paper lattice work in pale blue, pink and white were strung from the center post to the four corners of the room, and the stage, windows and door frames were festooned in the same colors. At the deep center of the stage was a large square and compass with a letter G all brightly illuminated with electric lights. Over the balcony was an electric star to represent the Eastern Star chapter, and in the windows were large emblems to represent the Masonic and Royal Arch chapters degrees. The work of decorating was done by Henry Joseph, and he is deserving of considerable credit for the tasty appearance of the ball room. Refreshments were served by ladies of the Eastern Star and proved to be a veritable banquet. The tables looked beautiful with their large bouquets of carnations and streamers of similar streamers and the white table covers. About 85 set down at the first table and it was not until the tables had been set a third time that all the guests had been seated. During the banquet music was furnished by one of the orchestras. It was about three o'clock next morning when the orchestra played Home Sweet Home, even then some of the dancers were reluctant to leave for their respective homes.

The annual township meeting was held at the usual hour on election day (last Monday), at which the clerk read his annual report and appropriations were made for another year. During the past year there has been assessed for the contingent fund 1-10th of one percent; for highway fund 3-10th of one percent and highway repair fund, outside of the village of Grayling, 1-4th of one percent. These appropriations for this year were left the same except for the contingent fund which was increased to 1-4 of one percent.

The regular meeting of the village council was held at the court house last Monday, instead of the town hall, which was being used for election purposes that evening. This was the annual meeting and the president and all the trustees were present. After disposing of the business in regular order the township treasurer, M. Hanson, made his annual report, which the committee reported to be in good order. Ordinances establishing fire limits within the down-town districts and one to prohibit the running at large of any and all kinds of domestic fowls within the village limits were adopted. These ordinances are published in this issue in legal form. The council adjourned to meet next Monday evening when the village appointments will be made.

SYNOPSIS.

Bill Cannon, the banana king, and his daughter, Rose, come to San Francisco to accompany her father, arrive at Antelope, Dominick Ryan, calls her mother to beg a ball invitation for his wife, and is refused. The determined old lady refuses to recognize her daughter's mother. Dominick had been trapped into a marriage with Bernice Iverson, a stenographer, several years before. She squanders his money, they have frequent quarrels, and he leaves her. Cannon and his daughter, who are now in Antelope, Dominick Ryan is rescued from storm in Antelope. Cannon nurses Dominick back to life. Two weeks later Bernice discovers in a paper where husband is and writes letter trying to smooth over difficulties between them. Dominick at last is able to leave fellow snowbound prisoners in hotel parlor. He leaves temper over talk of Bernice, an actress, to come to Antelope. Bernice is seen. Telegrams and mail arrive. Dominick gets letter from wife. Tells Rose he doesn't love wife and never will. Stormbound people begin to depart. Rose and Dominick embrace. Bernice, Rose's mother, demands explanation. Rose's brother Gene is made manager of ranch. And he is to get it if he stays sober a year. Cannon expresses sympathy for Dominick's position in talk with Rose. Dominick returns home.

On the Saturday morning she went out betimes. Inquiry at the railway office told her that the train which connected with the branch line to Rocky Bar did not reach the city till six in the evening. She ordered a dinner of the choicest viands and spent part of the morning passing from stall to stall in the market on Powell Street, spying about for dainties that might add a last elaborating touch to the lengthy menu. The afternoon was dedicated to the solemn rites of massaging, manicuring, and hair-dressing at a beauty doctor's. On an ordinary occasion these unwonted exertions in the pursuit of good looks would have tired her, but to-day she was keyed to a pitch where she did not notice small outside discomforts.

Long before six she was dressed, and sitting before the mirror in her room she laid on the last perfecting touches with a short stick of hard red substance and a circular piece of mossy-looking white stuff, which she rubbed with a rotary motion round and round her face. Her new dress of raspberry pink crepe betrayed the hand of an expert in its gracefully falling folds and the elegance with which it outlined her slim, long-waisted shape. Her artificially-redened hair waved back from her forehead in glossy ribbons; her face, all lines and hollows rubbed from it, looked fresh and youthful. With the subdued light falling on her through the silk and paper lamp shades, she looked a very pretty woman, the darkness of her long, brilliant eyes thrown into higher relief by the whiteness of her powdered face.

She was tremulously nervous. Every sound caused her to start and move to that part of the parlor whence she could look down the long passageway to the stair-head. Large bunches of greenery were massed here in the angles of the hall and stood in the corners of the sitting-room. Bowls filled with violets and roses were set on the table and mantelpiece, and the scent of these flowers, sweet and delicate, mingled with the crude, powerful perfume that the woman's draperies exhaled with every movement. At intervals she ran into her bedroom, seized the little, round, soft wand of white and rubbed it over her face with a quick concentric movement, drawing her upper lip down as she did so, which gave to her countenance with its anxious eyes an exceedingly comical expression.

It was nearly seven o'clock when the bell rang. With a last hasty look in the glass, she ran down the passageway to the stair-head. It was necessary to descend a few steps to a turn on the stairs from whence the lever that opened the door could be worked. As she stood on the small landing, thrown out in bright relief by a mass of dark foliage that stood in the angle of the wall, the door opened and Dominick entered. He looked up and saw her standing there, gaily dressed, brilliant, animated figure, smiling down at him.

"Ah, Berny," he said in a quiet, unemotional voice, "is that you?"

It was certainly not an enthusiastic greeting. A sensitive woman would have been shriveled by it, but Berny was not sensitive. She had realized from the start that she would probably have to combat the lingering surlyness left by the quarrel. As Dominick ascended, her air of smiling welcome was marked by a bland cheery unconsciousness of any past unpleasantness. She was not, however, an unconscious as she looked. She noted his heaviness of demeanor, the tired expression of his lifted face. He came up the stairs slowly, not yet being completely recovered, and it added to the suggestion of reluctance, of difficulty and spiritual approach, that seemed to encompass him in an unseen yet distinctly felt aura.

As he rose on a level with her, she stretched out her hands and, laying them on his shoulders, drew him toward her and kissed him. The coldness of his cheek, damp with the foggy night air, chilled the caress and she drew back from him, not so securely confident in her debonair, smiling assurance. He patted her lightly on the shoulder by way of greeting and said:

"How are you? All right?"

"Oh, I'm all right," she answered with brisk, determined sprightliness. "You're the one to ask about. You walk stiff, still. How are your feet?"

to forget the ugly episode of the quarrel and he gay and friendly again, dashed her spirits and made her feel unsure of herself and upset. She was determined, however, to show him that she had forgotten all about it, and as he turned the angle of the stairway she thrust her hand inside his arm and walked up beside him. They might have been a happy married couple, reunited after an absence, slowly coming up the stairs together arm in arm.

A few minutes later they were seated opposite each other at dinner. The little table glowed and gleamed, all Berny's bravery of silver and glass mustered for its adornment. The choice and delicate dinner began with a soup that Dominick especially liked, a fact which Berny hoped he would notice and mention. She was one of those women who have an unfeeling memory for what people like to eat; a single expression of preference would remain in her mind for years. Dominick and she had not lived together for a month before she knew everything in the way of food he liked or disliked. When she was annoyed with him, or especially bitter against him, she would order nothing but dishes that he did not care for, and when she was in a more friendly mood, as to-night, she would take pains and time to arrange a menu composed of those he preferred. He usually did not notice these rewards and punishments, but Berny always thought he did and was too stubborn, as she expressed it to herself, to show that he was affected by them.

She observed to-night that he neither looked, nor seemed to relish his food, but she made no comment, talking on in a breathless, lively way, asking questions of his trip, his accident, and the condition of his feet, as though there were no mortifying recollections connected with the cause of his sudden departure. Her only indication of embarrassment was a tendency to avoid anything like a moment of silence and to fly from one subject to another. Dominick answered her questions and told her of his wanderings with a slow, careful exactness. Save in the freeing of his feet, which matter he treated more lightly than it deserved, he was open with her in recounting the small happenings of what he called "his holiday," from the time of his walk from Rocky Bar to the day of his departure from Antelope.

They had progressed through the fish to the entree when her questions passed from his personal wanderings and adventures to his associates. What had been very anxious to get to this point, as she wanted to know what degree of intimacy he had reached with the banana king. Several times already she had tried to divert the conversation toward that subject, but it had been deflected by the young man, who seemed to find less personal topics more to his taste. Now she was advancing openly upon it, inquiring about the snow-bound group at Perley's, and awarding to any but the august name for which her ears were pricked a perfunctory attention.

"You've seen her," he answered, "you know what she looks like."

"I've never seen her to know who she was. I suppose I've passed her on the streets and at the theaters. Is she cordial and pleasant, or does she give herself airs because she's Bill Cannon's daughter?"

Dominick moved his feet under the table. It was difficult for him to answer Berny's questions politely.

"She doesn't give herself the least airs. She's perfectly simple and natural and kind."

"That's just what I've heard," his wife said, giving her head an agreeing wag. "They say she's just as easy and unassuming as can be. Did you think she was pretty when you saw her close to?"

"Really, Berny, I don't know," answered the victim in a tone of goaded patience. "She looks just the same close to as she does at a distance. I don't notice people's looks much. Yes, I suppose she's pretty."

"She has blonde hair," said Berny, leaning forward over her plate in the eagerness of her interest. "Did it look to you as if it was bleached?"

He raised his eyes, and his wife encountered an unexpected look of anger in them. She shrank a little, but totally unprepared for it.

"How should I know whether her hair was bleached or not?" he said sharply. "That's a very silly question."

Berny was taken aback. "I don't see that it is," she said with unusual and somewhat stammering mildness. "Most blonde-haired women, even if they haven't bleached their hair, have had it restored."

Dominick did not answer her. The servant presented a dish at his elbow and he motioned it away with an impatient gesture.

Berny, who was not looking at him, went on.

"What kind of clothes did she wear? They say she's an elegant dresser, gets almost everything from Paris, even her underwear. I suppose she didn't have her best things up there. But she must have had something, because the papers said they'd gone prepared for a two weeks' trip."

"I never noticed anything she wore."

"Well, isn't that just like you, Dominick Ryan?" exclaimed his wife, unable, at this unmerited disappointment, to refrain from some expression of her feelings. "And you might know I'd be anxious to hear what she had on."

"I'm very sorry, but I haven't an idea about any of her clothes. I think they were always dark, mostly black or brown."

"Did you notice," almost pleadingly, "what she wore when she went out?" Mrs. Whiting, the forlady at Hazel's millinery, says she imported a set of sables, muff, wrap and hat, for her this autumn. Hazel says it was just the finest thing of its kind you ever laid your eyes on. Did she have them up there?"

"I couldn't possibly tell you. I don't know what sables are. I saw her once with a fur cap on, but I think it belonged to Willoughby, an Englishman who was staying there, and used to have his cap hanging on the pegs in the hall. It's quite useless asking me questions. I don't know anything about the subject. Did you wind the clock while I was away?"

He looked at the clock, a possession of his own, given him in the days when his mother and sister delighted to ornament his rooms with costly gifts and in which he had never before evinced the slightest interest.

"Of course, I wound it," Berny said with an air of hurt protest. "Haven't I wound it regularly for nearly three years?"

This brought the subject of Rose Cannon to an end and she was not alluded to again during the dinner. The conversation reverted to such happenings in the city as Berny thought might interest her husband, and it seemed to her that he was pleased to sit and listen to her chatter of her sisters, the bank, the theaters, and the shops, than to dilate any further on his adventures in the snow-bound Sierra.

When the dinner was over, they returned to the front of the flat, where next to the parlor there was a tiny hall-room fitted up as a smoking-room and den. It was merely a continuation of the hall, and "the cozy corner" which Berny had had a Polk street upholsterer construct in it, occupied most of the available space, and crowded such visitors as entered in into the corners. It had been Berny's idea to have this room "lined with books" as she expressed it, but their joint possessions in this line consisting of some twenty-five volumes, and the fact that the contracted space made it impossible to accommodate both the books and the cozy corner, Berny had decided in favor of the latter.

She now seated herself on the divan that formed the integral part of this construction, and, piling the pillows behind her, leaned luxuriously back under the canopy of variegated stuffs which was supported by two formidable-looking lances.

Dominick sat in his easy chair. He always smoked in this room and read the papers, and presently he picked them up from the table and began to look them over. The conversation languished, became spasmodic, and finally died away. Berny, leaning back on the cushions, tried several times to revive it, but her husband from among the spread sheets of the evening press answered her with the inarticulate sounds of mental preoccupation, and sometimes with no sound at all, till she abandoned the attempt and leaned back under the canopy in a silence that was not by any means the somnolent quietude of after-dinner torpor.

To clock hands were pointing to half past nine when a ring at the bell was followed by the appearance of the Chinaman at the door, stating that the expressman had come with Mr. Ryan's valises. Dominick threw down his papers and left the room. As Berny sat silent, she could hear the expressman's gruff deep voice in the hall and the thuds of the valises as he thumped them down at the stair-head. Dominick answered him and there were a few more remarks, followed by the retreating sound of the man's heavy feet on the stairs and the bang of the hall door. She sat looking at the clock, waiting for her husband to return, and when he did not come and the hall seemed singularly quiet she leaned forward and sent an exploring glance down its dim length. Dominick was not there, but a square of light fell out from an open doorway of his room.

"Dominick," she called, "what are you doing?"

He came to the door of the room in his shirt-sleeves, a tall figure looking lean and powerful in this closer-fitting and lighter garb.

"I'm unpacking my things, and then I'm going to bed."

"Oh!" she answered with a falling inflection, leaning forward, with her elbows planted on her knees, craning her neck to see more plainly down the narrow passageway. "It's only half past nine; why do you want to go to bed so early?"

"I'm tired, and it will take me some time to get these things put away."

"Can I help you?" she asked without moving.

"No, thanks. There's nothing much to bother about. Good night, Berny," and he stepped back into the room and shut the door.

Berny sat as he had left her for a space, and then drew back upon the divan and leaned against the mound of pillows. She made the movement slowly and slowly, her face set in a rigidity of thought to which her body seemed fixed and obedient. She sat thus for an hour without moving, her eyes staring before her, two straight lines folded in the skin between her brows.

So he was still angry, angry and unforgiving. That was the way she read his behavior. The coldness that he exhaled—that penetrated even her unresponsive outer shell—she took to be the coldness of unappeased indignation. He never before been just like this. There was a something of acquired forbearance and patience about him—a cultivated thing, not a spontaneous outward indication of an inner condition of being—which was new to her observation. He was not sulky or cross; he was simply withdrawn from her and trying to hide it under a manner of careful, guarded civility. It was different from any state she had yet seen him in, but it never crossed her mind that it might be caused by the influence of another woman.

He was still angry—that was what Berny thought; and sitting on the divan under the canopy with its fiercely pointed lances she meditated on the subject. His winning back was far from accomplished. He was not so "easy" as she had always thought. A feeling of respect for him entered into her musings, a feeling that was novel, for in her regard for her husband

Eugenio Cannon, with his misanthropic playing to him in the gloaming; it's very picturesque. Did you ever think of having a Court Fool too, or perhaps you don't feel as if you needed one?"

He arose from his chair before Gene, who never quite understood, the somewhat ferocious humor of his parent, had time to reply.

"Well, so long," said the old man; "be good children and don't get into mischief, and Rose, see that your brother doesn't get lost or so carried away by the Post and the Pecosant that he forgets the dinner hour. Adios, girls."

A half-hour later he walked down the flight of marble steps that led to the dignified sweep from the front door to the street. It was a wonderful day and for a moment he paused, looking with observing eyes at the prospect of hill and bay which seemed to glitter in the extreme clearness of the atmosphere. Like all Californians he had a strong, natural appreciation of scenic and climatic beauty. Preoccupied with thoughts and schemes which were anything but uplifting, he yet was sensitively responsive to the splendors of the view before him, to the unclouded, pure blue of the vault above, to the balmy softness of the air against his face. Some one had once

RESINOL RELIEVED ITCHING INSTANTLY And Completely Cured Skin Humors.

If you have eczema or any other itching, burning skin trouble, the best evidence of what Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment can do for you is the word of one who was cured by them after weeks of suffering. Adolph Schoen, 742 Shepherd Ave., Brooklyn, writes:

Nov. 1, 1912—"At first little red spots were seen on my arms and body, which I noticed were getting larger every day. They itched me so much that I scratched myself until I bled. There were times when I stood up all night and scratched. I was troubled about three weeks, during which time I used all kinds of ointments to do me no good whatever. Then, finally, I thought of trying Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. As soon as I applied Resinol Ointment I felt much relief. After using it a few times, I noticed the sore spots slowly fading away. In about a month I was cured completely."

The soothing, healing balsams in Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, penetrate every tiny pore of the skin, clearing it of all impurities, driving away eczema, rashes, ringworm, psoriasis, and other eruptions, and making pimples and blackheads impossible. Prescribed by physicians for eighteen years. For free samples write to Dept. B-K, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Every drugist sells Resinol Ointment (50c) and Resinol Soap (35c), or sent by parcel post on receipt of price.

The First Climbers. A Munich paper has been searching the records of history to discover who were the first mountain climbers. It gives the palm to Moses and his ascent of Mount Sinai, and rules out Noah for his ascent of Mount Ararat because he made it in a boat. There is sufficient evidence to show that the ancients thought mountain climbing sheer madness.

No one in the time of Horace or Polybius wanted to go climbing for a summer holiday. A Chinese emperor in the seventh century was the first to make climbing fashionable in the east. But the first true tourists in Europe seem to have been Dante, Petrarch and Leonard. Then came the Emperor Maximilian I., who used to hunt in the mountains near Innsbruck, and after him Conrad von Geuner and Josias Simler explored the Swiss mountains. But climbing for pleasure such as we know it today was not thought of until quite recently.—Westminster Gazette.

What's the Mexican play? he growled without removing his hand. "La Paloma," answered Gene, pleased to be questioned thus amicably by his automatic sire. "Generally La Paloma, but he can play The Heart Bowed Down and the Toreador song from Carmen. I want him to learn the Miserere from Trovatore. It's nice to sit on the porch after dinner and listen while you smoke."

"Sort of Court Minstrel," said his father, thumping down his napkin with his hand spread flat on it. "Don't there had previously been a careless, Paris as the ideal home of the man of great wealth and small scruples. His answer had been that he preferred San Francisco because there were more fine days in the year there than anywhere else he knew of.

Now he paused, sniffing the air with distended nostril and inhaling it in deep, grateful inspirations. His eye moved slowly over the noble prospect, noted the deep sapphire tint of the bay, the horizon, violet dark against a pale sky, and the gem-like blues and amethysts of the distant hills. He turned his glance in the other direction and looked down the gray expanse of the street, the wide, clear, stately street, with its air of clean spaciousness, sun-bathed, silent, almost empty, in the calm quietude of the Sabbath afternoon. The bustling thoroughfares of greater cities, with their dark, sordid crowds, their unlovely, vulgar hurry, their distracting noise, were offensive to him. The wonder crossed his mind, as it had done before, how men who could escape from such surroundings chose to remain in them.

He walked forward slowly, a thick-set, powerful figure, his frock-coat buttoned tight about the barrel-like roundness of his torso, a soft, black felt hat pulled well down on his head. His feet were broad and blunt like his hands, and in their square-toed shoes he planted them firmly on the pavement with a tread of solid, deliberate authority. His forward progress had something in it of an invincible, resistless march. He was thinking deeply as he walked, arranging and planning, and there was nothing in his figure, or movements, or the expression of his face, which suggested the sauntering aimlessness of an afternoon stroll.

CHAPTER XI.

The Gods in the Machine.

On the second Sunday after their return from Antelope, Bill Cannon refused to dedicate the afternoon to paying calls. This, at least, was what he told his daughter at luncheon as he, she, and Gene sat over the end of the meal. To pay calls was not one of the Bonanza King's customs, and in answer to Rose's query as to whom he was going to honor thus, he responded that he thought he'd "start in with Della Ryan."

Rose made no comment on this intelligence. The sharp glance he cast at her discovered no suggestion of consciousness in the peach-like placidity of her face. It gratified him to see her thus unsuspecting, and in the mellow warmth of his satisfaction he turned and addressed a polite query to Gene as to how he intended spending the afternoon. Gene and Rose, it appeared, were going to the park to hear the band. Gene loved a good band, and one that played in the park Sunday afternoons was especially good. The Sunday before, Gene had heard it play Post and Pecosant and the Overture of William Tell, and it was great! That was one of the worst things about living on a ranch, Gene complained, you didn't have any music except at the men's house at night when one of the Mexicans played on an accordion.

The old man, with his elbow on the table, and a short, blunt-fingered hand stroking his beard, looked at his son with narrowed eyes full of veiled amusement. When he did not find Gene disagreeably aggravating as his only failure, he could, as it were, stand away from him and realize how humorous he was if you took him in a certain way.

"What's the Mexican play?" he growled without removing his hand. "La Paloma," answered Gene, pleased to be questioned thus amicably by his automatic sire. "Generally La Paloma, but he can play The Heart Bowed Down and the Toreador song from Carmen. I want him to learn the Miserere from Trovatore. It's nice to sit on the porch after dinner and listen while you smoke."

"Sort of Court Minstrel," said his father, thumping down his napkin with his hand spread flat on it. "Don't eyes staring before her, two straight lines folded in the skin between her brows.

So he was still angry, angry and unforgiving. That was the way she read his behavior. The coldness that he exhaled—that penetrated even her unresponsive outer shell—she took to be the coldness of unappeased indignation. He never before been just like this. There was a something of acquired forbearance and patience about him—a cultivated thing, not a spontaneous outward indication of an inner condition of being—which was new to her observation. He was not sulky or cross; he was simply withdrawn from her and trying to hide it under a manner of careful, guarded civility. It was different from any state she had yet seen him in, but it never crossed her mind that it might be caused by the influence of another woman.

He was still angry—that was what Berny thought; and sitting on the divan under the canopy with its fiercely pointed lances she meditated on the subject. His winning back was far from accomplished. He was not so "easy" as she had always thought. A feeling of respect for him entered into her musings, a feeling that was novel, for in her regard for her husband

there had previously been a careless, Paris as the ideal home of the man of great wealth and small scruples. His answer had been that he preferred San Francisco because there were more fine days in the year there than anywhere else he knew of.

Now he paused, sniffing the air with distended nostril and inhaling it in deep, grateful inspirations. His eye moved slowly over the noble prospect, noted the deep sapphire tint of the bay, the horizon, violet dark against a pale sky, and the gem-like blues and amethysts of the distant hills. He turned his glance in the other direction and looked down the gray expanse of the street, the wide, clear, stately street, with its air of clean spaciousness, sun-bathed, silent, almost empty, in the calm quietude of the Sabbath afternoon. The bustling thoroughfares of greater cities, with their dark, sordid crowds, their unlovely, vulgar hurry, their distracting noise, were offensive to him. The wonder crossed his mind, as it had done before, how men who could escape from such surroundings chose to remain in them.

He walked forward slowly, a thick-set, powerful figure, his frock-coat buttoned tight about the barrel-like roundness of his torso, a soft, black felt hat pulled well down on his head. His feet were broad and blunt like his hands, and in their square-toed shoes he planted them firmly on the pavement with a tread of solid, deliberate authority. His forward progress had something in it of an invincible, resistless march. He was thinking deeply as he walked, arranging and planning, and there was nothing in his figure, or movements, or the expression of his face, which suggested the sauntering aimlessness of an afternoon stroll.

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The relative percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

Bread made with
Royal Cream of Tartar Powder:

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with
phosphate powder:

68% Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67% Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

MICHIGAN FAIR BIPLANE TO CARRY PASSENGERS.

Owing to the unusual advantages offered by the Michigan State Fair grounds as an aviation field, "Eddie" Korn, whose great Benoist tractor biplane will give daily exhibitions during the Fair, has consented to carry a passenger with him on every flight.

Mr. Korn is a firm believer that the public wants to be convinced of the practicability of the modern aeroplane. He is under the impression, and Manager Dickinson quite agrees with him, that a demonstration of the feasibility of the biplane for carrying more than the driver is more appreciated by the onlookers than spirals and volplaning and the like.

The broad level expanse at the Michigan State Fair grounds and the unexcelled opportunities for fluttering to the earth in the case of serious accident makes it an ideal place to give passenger-carrying exhibitions. Then, too, the same level expanse practically eliminates the chances of dangerous air currents interfering with the demonstrations.

On a recent visit to the State Fair offices in Detroit Mr. Korn said: "I want to prove conclusively to the people of Michigan that a tractor biplane is safe under normal conditions. By this I mean merely attempting to navigate the air and not do all sorts of crazy dips and sudden turns."

"You are going to ask how is it that so many aviators are killed every year if a birdman's life is comparatively safe. I'll tell you why. Simply because they're not content with an ordinary flight, and in their confidence they lost control of their machines while executing a fancy spiral of some sort. Carelessness is the cause of two-thirds of the deaths and inferior machines account for a good many of the others."

"I have always maintained that a powerful engine was necessary for successful operation in the air, to overcome any adverse conditions that may arise from changes in consistency of atmosphere. I have an engine in my biplane which almost makes my exhibitions independent of weather conditions. I don't have to wait for a calm day in order to perform."

The Best Bargain You Ever Made

HOW do you measure the value of a bargain? Suppose you bought an engine that did practically all of your hardest work for you, sawing, pumping, grinding, etc., and that saved so much money that it soon paid for itself. Would you call that a good bargain?

An IHC engine will do all that, and more. Having paid for itself, it works steadily year after year until, like our Clay County friend who has used an IHC engine for six years, you will say, "My IHC engine is the best bargain I ever made."

IHC Oil and Gas Engines

are thoroughly dependable, and unusually durable. The fine-grained, grey iron cylinders and pistons are worked together to a perfect fit. Ground piston rings insure maximum power from the explosion. The fuel mixer is the most effective known. Engines are large and carefully fitted. No part is too heavy to be efficient, yet every part is strong.

IHC engines are made in all sizes—vertical and horizontal; portable and stationary; air and water-cooled; in sizes from 1/2 horse power, to operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, distillate, benzene or alcohol. Of 12 to 60 horse power, for plowing, threshing, etc.; grinding, sawing, pumping and spraying outfits, complete the line.

The IHC local dealer will show you all the good points of the IHC engine. Get catalogue from him, or write

SAN JAK

The Greatest Cure and Preventive for Bright's Disease.

No one ever cured kidney trouble with a pill, powder, tablet or mineral water. The reason is there is nothing in them by which you can force the drug to the vital point and neutralize the poison in the tissue and reduce the inflammation or granulation of the kidneys. (These are statistics by the most eminent men in the faculty.)

Symptoms of kidney trouble: swelling under the eyes, grayish white or wax color of the skin denotes granular diseases of the kidneys. The cure is SAN-JAK. The reason is clear. SAN-JAK neutralizes poison in the tissue of the vital organs of the body, clearing away inflammation and catching in all parts of the digestive tract and vital organs. SAN-JAK is the only preparation allowing a normal expansion of the kidneys at all times, by which action the kidneys are enabled to absorb alkaline sulphates, which are the decomposed products of the bowels, and eliminate them. Otherwise, in renal weakness, this condition is the cause of ill health and Bright's with rheumatism.

SAN-JAK will not harm a weak person, and for the weak ones its faithful use means perfect health and strength for young and old.

Man should die of old age, not disease. San-Jak will keep your blood as pure as a lily. We sell San-Jak and will guarantee satisfaction or return the price of one bottle, $1.00.

Pure and Pleasant Dr. King's New Discovery Drives Away Cough and Cold. Makes You Feel Fine.

You know how very embarrassing it is to constantly cough at parties, in church and other public places. Besides suffering the distress of coughing, you regret the annoyance to those with whom you are brought in contact, and decide not to go out again while your cold lasts, causing yourself much inconvenience.

"Every winter," writes Mrs. M. O. Cross, Granbury, Texas, "I suffered with severe coughs and colds, but since using Dr. King's New Discovery, I have not been bothered or annoyed with either for over two years."

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery. He will refund your money if not satisfied.

A. M. LEWIS & COMPANY

Danish Root Seeds

The climate and soil of Denmark are perfectly adapted to the production of perfect mangels, cabbages, ruta bagas, turnips, calabages and cauliflower. No other country produces seeds of these kinds equal to the Danish. I have just received a large shipment of these seeds direct from the most experienced grower in that country. Ask for prices.
